Marin Cops Quiz Marine In Killings

A young Marine who was a friend of Everett and Margaret Zimmerman and an odd-job worker on their Marin county ranch was questioned yesterday about the couple's murder a week ago.

He was identified as 18-year-old Robert D. Sidbeck, who was on leave after boot camp training and visiting his family's San Anselmo home at the time of the killing.

Police said he left the day the bodies were found and reported for duty two days later at the Marine base in

Dr. Harold Spears, San Francisco's retiring superintendent of schools, swept local problems under the rug yesterday in a back-to-school address to more than 3000 public school teachers.

Two inspectors dispatched by Marin Sheriff Louis Moutanos arrived in Memphis last Sunday and have since been questioning the youth on the base.

Meanwhile, Moutanos and Undersheriff Sidney Stinson conferred with District Attorney Bruce Bales for three hours yesterday afternoon on new "evidence" about the crime.

The sheriff said a decision in the case will be made after State criminal laboratory experts finish inspecting the car used by the murderer to leave the scene.

Sidbeck's 9-year-old sister, Elsie Kay, was a house guest of the Zimmermans the night the murderer entered the secluded ranch house and bludgeoned the sleeping couple to death in bed.

Margaret Sanger, who risked jail and scorn to promote the birth control movement throughout the world, died yesterday of hardening of the arteries. She was 83.

Death came to the mother of planned parenthood at the Valley House Convalescent Center. A family spokesman said she had been ill for the past five years.

Twice married and a mother of three herself, Mrs. Sanger traveled the globe campaigning for birth control. She made nine trips to Japan, three to India and many to England.

"To take a subject like contraception and make it understood; to separate it from an abortion and have the masses of people agree to it is quite an accomplishment," Mrs. Sanger said in a 1963 interview.

Atlanta 100 Bad-Butcher strike to the whites - O.P. they might just cut you out next election

Rioting Negroes fought police with bricks and bottles yesterday and toppled the city's mayor from a car top onto the street when he attempted to calm them.

Police brought the violence under control by tossing tear gas canisters and repeatedly firing pistols and riot guns above the heads of the rioters.

A sniper opened fire from a building in the riot-torn district shortly after dark, but police rushed in before anyone was hit. Seven suspects were taken into custody.

Twelve persons, including four policemen, were injured.

Arrests mounted to 53 in the area.

A policeman was cut on the face and had a possible jaw fracture, and a police detective and at least seven others persons were treated for tear gas effects.

DAMAGE

Windows were smashed in two patrol cars parked on a street. Negroes bombarded a white motorist's car with rocks. Another police car was turned on its side, with all its windows shattered.

Washington

The Government has started criminal proceedings against the Upjohn Co., a giant pharmaceutical manufacturer, which are based in part on a failure to publish a warning to physicians concerning the safety of a prescription drug if used by pregnant women.

The drug — Upjohn's biggest seller—is Orinase, an oral antidiabetes agent.

Marketed in 1957, it is said by the company to have been used by more than 750,000 patients. It has been reported that in tests on animals, massive doses of the drug can kill or deform the fetus.

The charges involve the entry about Orinase that Upjohn supplied for publication in the 1965 edition of Physician's Desk Reference, the single most important source of prescription information for more than 200,000 physicians.

The maximum penalty the

JOKES

Spears, 64, who retires next June 30, did not mention, in his Teachers' Institute speech at Masonic Auditorium such festering disputes as de-facto racial segregation or the choice of his successor.

Instead, he cracked a joke or two about his own small-town Indiana schooldays and then launched into a long description of his recent world tour.

Here were a few of Spears' points:

The United States is a sort of benevolent colonial power, he said, and this is how it should be. "We tend other nations' crops and double as scarecrows to scare off those who would come in and plunder these fields."

"Every child has the right to be treated as an individual. You protect that right. But this right is not protected in India. The Hindu can kill a Moslem but not a cow or a rat which eats up their limited store of grain."

"India is an exceedingly exciting and puzzling country."

TAJ MAHAL

Two great problems struck him during his tour of South East Asia, the "wretchedness and abject poverty" and the "threat of Chinese power undermining the integrity of developing nations."

Spears talked about the Taj Mahal — "Its beauty is blemished by its price, the gap between the ruler and

The assassination took place in full view of members of Parliament as the bells rang for the start of the session.

As blood spurted onto the carpet, members fell on the assailant and pinned him, struggling, to the floor. He was then taken into custody.

ASSASSIN

The assassin was Dimitri Stafendas, a 45-year-old South African of Greek and Portuguese origin. He reportedly had complained to co-workers that the government was doing too much for non-whites and not enough for poor whites.

Verwoerd slumped at his desk with his head down. Four medical members of parliament rushed to help him and one, Dr. C. V. Van Der Merwe, gave him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation in an attempt to revive him.

the city on request of the mayor, but they were held in reserve. Police began pulling out of the area about 9 p.m.

The riot started in midafternoon after police shot and seriously wounded a Negro whom they suspected of car theft.

Within three hours of the shooting more than 400 Negroes, including several members of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, were rushing through the streets shouting, "Black power—police brutality."

When Mayor Ivan Allen Jr. rushed to the scene and climbed upon a police car to talk to the rioters, they surged toward him and rocked the car again and again until the mayor tumbled to the street, shaken but uninjured.

PLEAS

The 55-year-old mayor scrambled to his feet and then raced about the riot area, which is only two blocks from the city's new $18 million Atlanta Stadium.

"Go home, he pleaded 'please go home.'"

"Don't go — stay here and protest police brutality," said members of SNCC who walked behind the mayor.

The police said Stokely Carmichael, SNCC's 25-year-old chairman, came to the scene on tree-lined Capitol avenue soon after the 1:30 p.m. shooting and told Negroes that "we're going to be back at 4 p.m. and tear this place up."

Two other SNCC members, Willie (Bill) Ware and Bob Walton, were taken into custody by Atlanta police while touring the area in a sound truck, urging Negroes to gather to protest the shooting.

Plutonium Sale Goes To Congress

Washington

To promote American - European cooperation in the peaceful development of atomic energy, the Administration has asked for congressional approval of a record sale of plutonium to the European Atomic Energy Community.

Under the proposed transaction, the United States would sell the six-nation community, known as Euratom, 1000 kilograms of plutonium, or about $43 million worth.

A PAUSE

Plutonium once used exclusively in atomic weapons would be used by the Euratom members, particularly France and West Germany, to develop an advanced atomic power reactor. This reactor, known as the breeder, produces more fissionable fuel than it consumes.

The size of the transaction and the potential use of it for the manufacture of atomic weapons, gave the Administration considerable pause.

DIFFERENCES

Euratom, which purchased 500 kilograms of plutonium in 1964, originally requested the additional plutonium last spring to meet its breeder reactor research needs over the next five years.

The Administration delayed in approving the sale,

President de Gaulle touched down yesterday in this sun-drenched capital of the New Hebrides, the world's only territorial condominium.

Flying 300 miles north from New Caledonia, he paid a relaxed five-hour visit to the colonial territory ruled jointly by France and Britain. A condominium is a jointly administered protectorate.

His brief stop here was the second he has made in Pacific in the course of a world tour. He returned to New Caledonia late in the day. Today he will fly to French Polynesia, where he will inspect France's new Pacific nuclear test installations and witness an experimental nuclear explosion.

Syria Foils Coup Plot by Ex-Premier

Beirut, Lebanon

The left-wing Syrian regime has foiled a plot by ousted moderates of the ruling Baath party to regain control and sweep the nation with a "wave of terrorism, violence, murder and destruction," Radio Damascus said yesterday.

A government statement said supporters of the Baath party international command, toppled by strongman Salah Jeddid six months ago, joined with "imperialists and reactionary forces" in the attempt to overthrow the Damascus regime.

The broadcast, monitored here, named former Premier Salah Bitar, former Party Secretary Michel Aflak and Dr. Mounif Razzaz, international command secretary-general, as leaders of the abortive coup.

It said the plotters were arrested and had confessed and would be tried without mercy by a special national tribunal. But there was no confirmation that the major leaders were actually in jail.

The plotters also masterminded Bitar's recent escape from a Damascus jail, the government broadcast said.

How'd you like to write checks on

The information was quietly filed on August 22 in Federal Court in Grand Rapids, Mich. The case is being handled by United States Attorney Harold Beaton, who said yesterday that the date for arraignment has not been set.

In Kalamazoo, Mich., a spokesman for Upjohn said he had no comment on the plea that will be entered by the firm. He said Orinase sales last year came to about 17 percent of the firm's total sales of $243 million. Upjohn's 1965 net after-tax income was $37 million. The criminal information charges that Orinase, which has the generic name tolbutamide, was mislabeled because the entry in the 1965 Physician's Desk reference — the same entry as that used in some prior years — "was not, as required by regulations, substantially the same as the labeling authorized" by the Food and Drug Administration.

The charge is based on FDA's long-standing rule that entries in PDR—which are prepared, edited, approved and paid for by drug manufacturers—are legally labeling. Under the 1962 amendments to the drug law the agency also requires drug ads to contain a true statement in brief summary of the FDA-approved brochure enclosed in each package of a drug product.

UPJOHN

The Upjohn spokesman said that in a difference of opinion with FDA the firm considered the PDR entry to be paid advertising, and that under that interpretation less entry to appear in the 1966 PDR without inclusion of certain information that had been omitted. Upjohn complied and added the following information:

"The safety and the usefulness of Orinase during pregnancy have not been established at this time, either from the standpoint of the mother or the fetus." In animal studies, the entry said, tolbutamide in massive doses has been shown to kill or deform the fetus.

"It is not known whether or not this finding is applicable to human subjects," Upjohn said. "Clinical studies thus far are quite limited and experimental. Therefore, the use of Orinase is not recommended for the management of diabetes when complicated by pregnancy."

Air Strike Cost City $250,000

Last month's 24-day airline strike cost an estimated $250,000 in lost income at San Francisco International Airport, George F. Hansen, airport general manager, said yesterday.

Hansen told the Public Utilities Commission that the July traffic passenger volume was 820,973, down nearly 5 percent from the July, 1965, figure of 852,515.

June's pre-strike traffic volume of 1,061,279 was the first month in the airport's history to top a million.

Hansen estimated that, without the strike, July traffic would have been 1,130,000.

men, "and they were saying that the man had been shot while handcuffed and that he was murdered by white police."

The police denied the accusations. The wounded man, Harold Louis Prather, was reported by a spokesman at Grady Memorial Hospital in "poor condition."

"This is an explosive area, and they (the police) come down here and shoot a Negro — good God Almighty," said Cleveland Sellers, SNCC's project and program director. "People here are just reacting to police brutality."

Other SNCC officials on capitol avenue during the rioting were Ruby Doris Robinson, executive secretary of the Committee, and Ivanhoe Donaldson, head of the organization's New York office.

In the beginning, the missile-throwing was sporadic. But after the police used tear gas to rout a group of bottle throwers Negroes hurled volley after volley of bricks and bottles. At one point, the police threw tear gas into a home, which they said had been the center of some bottle-throwing, and a mother, her five small children and their grandmother were forced into the street.

The family was taken to Grady Memorial hospital in an ambulance.

Heavy police details rushed into a Negro section about one mile from the trouble spot last night after a radio newsman's car was overturned by Negroes near a church. Reporter Mike Davis of the Atlanta Constitution said one of the Negroes pulled a pistol and fired.

"I heard glass breaking,"

Chances Fading for Grand Canyon Dams

Washington

The Colorado river Project bill with its controversial Grand Canyon dams appears headed for the legislative graveyard this year.

Arizona Congressmen Morris K. Udall, a Democrat, and Jon J. Rhodes, a Republican, are expected to issue a joint statement on the subject today. Their statement was understood to paint a pessimistic picture of the $1.7, billion measure's chances.

If the measure is indeed buried, it would be a major victory for the Sierra Club and other nature-lovers who have attacked, in particular, the two proposed Colorado river dams above and below Grand Canyon National Park. They claim the dams would damage the canyon's natural beauty.
