-----Two highly capable Negro male Atlantans were promoted to top positions last week. William Allison, former deputy director of EOA (Equal Opportunity Atlanta), was promoted to Director to succeed Jim Parham who resigned to assume a new post. "Bill's" competence is commensurate with the requirements of the job--- Kelvin Wall has been named a vice-President of the Coca-Cola Company and becomes the first man "of color" to occupy such a seat. Mr. Wall possesses qualities which match the occasion. When black men receive their deserved and earned positions, each of us shares the pride of such recognition for it is a comfort to know that racism doesn't "always" prevail. This columnist congratulates these two men who obviously have both natural and acquired abilities!!
